Germany Probes Google’s Market Position, Data Use

Berlin: German regulators have launched an investigation into Google's position in the market, and how the search engine and advertising giant handles user data. The Federal Cartel Office, or Bundeskartellamt, said Tuesday that it has started proceedings against Google entities in Germany, Ireland and California based on new provisions in German competition law that apply to large digital companies.

Similar probes were launched into the activities of Facebook and Amazon in recent months. Under the provisions, which came into force in January, the Federal Cartel Office can ban companies that are of “paramount significance for competition across markets” from engaging in practices deemed to be anti-competitive. “Due to the large number of digital services offered by Google, such as the Google search engine, YouTube, Google Maps, the Android operating system or the Chrome browser, the company could be considered to be of paramount significance for competition across markets,” the head of the regulatory body, Andreas Mundt, said in a statement. Google didn't immediately respond to a request for comment. – AP

No Data Compromise, Domino’s Assures Customers; Hires Global Forensic Co

Ratna.Bhushan@timesgroup.com

New Delhi: Domino's Pizza sent out letters to its customers late on Tuesday, stating that it has hired a global forensic firm to investigate the massive data breach it faced and identify the perpetrators, and sought to ensure thousands of its customers that no user data has been compromised. “We have hired a global forensic agency to investigate the matter to try and identify the perpetrators behind the attack. We have lodged a formal complaint with the relevant authorities and also filed a complaint with the cyber crime cell.” the letter sent to customers said. Jubilant FoodWorks Ltd (JFL), which operates 1,314 Domino's Pizza restaurants in the country, has faced a massive data breach incident involving 18 crore users and leaked information, mobile numbers and GPS locations being made available on the dark web.

“We would like to categorically assert and reassure you that no data pertaining to financial information of any user was compromised. Domino's as a policy does not store financial details of users such as complete credit card number, CVV, passwords etc,” the letter sent to customers said. The communication to customers added that the pizza chain takes cyber security very seriously and that it considers confidentiality of user data to be of utmost importance.

“Please be assured that we will be working with leading security experts on further strengthening our security protocols and making them world class,” the letter added. Jittery consumers have been tweeting over the last couple of days asking for clarity on the data breach, with many posting that they are deleting Domino's app. Total app downloads stood at 51.2 million at the end of the December 2020 quarter, JFL had said in its third quarter earnings statement.
